

GLOBE REPUBLIC.

Daily Edition.

DAILY WEATHER REPORT.

FOR THIS LOCALITY, AS FURNISHED BY J. D. BRYCE, REPLYING FOR THE GLOBE REPUBLIC.

February 5, 1885	Wind	Bar	Therm.	Humid.
4:30 a. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
6:30 a. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
8:30 a. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
10:30 a. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
12:30 p. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
2:30 p. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
4:30 p. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
6:30 p. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
8:30 p. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0
10:30 p. m.	N. E.	30.0	32.0	70.0

Amount of snow, 2 inches; snow-water, 0.00. Temperature below zero this a. m.

CITY MATTERS.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

The Stewart-Folger Wedding Last Evening—Other Matrimonial Affairs—Reception at St. Paul.

Married—Thursday evening, February 5, by Rev. Joseph Kyle, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, at residence of the bride's mother, No. 66 North Limestone street, Mr. Harry S. Folger and Miss Laura E. Stewart.

The bride and groom were former "next-door neighbors" and, in days of boyhood and girlhood, playmates, the ever-increasing regard and warm attachment thus early formed resulting inevitably and naturally in the consummation of plighted vows witnessed with pleasure by scores of intimate friends and relatives last evening. Two hundred invitations had been issued and the company assembled, composed very largely of young society people, numbered about one hundred and fifty. Regrets and congratulations were received from several distant points, Nebraska, Boston, Lockport, N. Y., St. Louis, and congratulatory telegrams from A. L. Guthrie, Henderson, Ky., and Daniel Boyle, Buffalo, N. Y. The guests were received by Mrs. Alice B. Stewart, assisted by Mrs. Louise E. Folger, and while awaiting the appearance of the bride party were entertained with music by Prof. Rigo, the harpist. The ceremony was performed punctually at nine, the bride and groom, accompanied by the bridesmaids and attendants, advancing on a pathway formed by white satin ribbons stretched from the staircase and taking position in the south parlor, beneath a wide arch of similar springing from pyramids of rare, living plants on either side, a horse-shoe of tube-roses depending from the crown of the arch, dark drapery forming an appropriate background. In beautiful words the officiating clergyman prefaced the usual formula of pronouncing the twin one flesh, closing by presenting the wedding ring, which was placed upon the bride's hand by the bridesmaid. Congratulations of the best friends followed. The attendants were Miss Platt, of Columbus, bridesmaid, and Mr. A. J. Beckley, of this city, groomsmen. The bride's costume was of white satin silk, en train, with oriental lace and corsage decoration of Marcella roses, a knot of which was held in the hand, the maid's of cream-colored cashmere, en train, with oriental lace and decorations of artificial flowers. The groom, his "best man" and the ushers, Mr. Robert Richter and Mr. A. M. Crothers, were in tail evening dress. The very excellent and well-ordered refreshments served were prepared by Mrs. Emily Thomas without variation from former successes as caterer on such occasions, the guests being seated sociably, in groups, at small tables in the several apartments and halls, all of which were prettily decorated with flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Folger took their departure at 1:45 a. m. by L. & W. train, for St. Louis, proceeding thence by train down the Mississippi to New Orleans, attending the exposition and Mardi Gras demonstrations, returning in about three weeks and making their home at Mrs. Stewart's residence. The groom is a well-known young business man of the city, in charge of the "extra" department at P. P. Mast & Co.'s works. The bride is a lovely and lovable lady, of great worth, personality, and amiability. The wedding itself was universally pronounced remarkably pleasant and agreeable, in a social sense, guests, no less than those more intimately concerned, being indebted to the watchfulness and skill of the gentlemanly ushers for much of the smoothness with which everything passed off. It is auspicious, all hope and belief, of a life of happiness, content and prosperity for the well-matched and newly-married couple.

The bridal presents were on view in the upper hall and were abundantly admired with sufficient reason. A fact quite unusual, there was no duplication, and another fact more unusual still, there was not a single gift in the entire collection. The groom's gift to his bride was diamond ear-rings, which formed a part of the bridal costume. P. P. Mast & Co. and office associates of the groom presented a most beautiful set of hand-painted china with cream set added. The bicycle club's remembrance was a large easy chair, upholstered in crimson broadcloth velvet. There were solid silver, cut and colored glass sets, plaques, pictures, ornaments, toilet sets, etc., to the end of the chapter, and to the bride, from her mother, a gold watch.

At 8 o'clock last night the lives of Mr. George D. Leslie and Miss Elgie Christy were indissolubly linked by the bonds of holy matrimony. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. L. Wilkinson at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. E. Stealy, corner of Clinton avenue and Liberty street. Mr. C. C. Leslie, brother of the groom, and Miss Nellie Watt performed the parts of groomsmen and bridesmaid in a manner becoming the solemnity of the occasion. The affair was quiet and unostentatious in manner, only the near relatives of the contracting parties being present. After the ceremony the party sat down to supper, prepared by Mrs. Stanley, of the most tempting viands of the season.

That they were not forgotten by their friends was manifest by the number of useful, as well as ornamental, presents which they were the glad recipients. The happy couple will go to housekeeping immediately, and will be located for the present on South Factory street. May their happiness extend perpetually and their joy be unbounded.

The social event of the season in St. Paul, M. E. Church circles was the elegant reception and banquet tendered the official members of the church and their friends last night by the esteemed sexton, Mr. John Emerson. It has been a custom with Mr. Emerson, wherever he has been employed as sexton, to some time during his term, give a supper to the official members of the church. On the occasion of the one last night "Uncle John," as he is familiarly known, eclipsed anything he had ever attempted of the same kind.

About ten days ago invitations were sent out to the number of nearly one hundred, and almost without exception, they all responded. The gathering first assembled in the auditorium, and an hour passed in social enjoyment and conversation as to what was to follow. At about eight o'clock the company was ushered into the lower part of the church and they were greeted by the sight of as nice looking tables as ever graced a banquet hall. The guests were all seated, and after a short prayer by Mr. J. G. Talbot, of Urbana, proceeded to show their substantial appreciation of "Uncle John's" hospitality. Part of the credit of getting up this supper is due to Mrs. Captain Irvine, and certainly it was a credit. The tables were tastefully arranged, and at each place was placed a bouquet, and the table was handsomely arrayed with flowers.

After the supper remarks were made by Messrs. J. G. Talbot, Judge J. C. Miller, J. W. Pierce, P. P. Mast, and others. Little did Mr. Emerson imagine when he invited his guests that a surprise was in store for him also. When Dr. Tuckley, pastor of the church, arose to congratulate him upon the success of the reception, a large and elegant easy chair and a handsomely-bound Bible were brought into the room, and amid the pleasurable excitement brought forth by the surprise, Mr. Tuckley, in a neat address, presented them to Mr. Emerson. The latter responded in a manner as much calculated to express his surprise as any words could do it. The following inscription was written in the Bible: "This book and easy chair were presented to John Emerson in recognition of his faithful and efficient service as sexton of St. Paul M. E. church, Springfield, Ohio, and as an expression of their Christian regard for him, by the following official members and other friends of the church upon the occasion of his entertaining them at an elegant evening reception in the church parlors, February 5, 1885."

About ten o'clock, after a prayer and the singing of "Blest be the tie that binds," the company separated.

With a working official board and a model preacher and model sexton, St. Paul is bound to be a success.

The Woman's Benevolent Society.

The annual meeting of the W. B. S. was held at the Second Presbyterian Church on last evening.

Mrs. J. A. S. Guy, president, delivered the annual address, in which the work of the society, together with many of its difficulties, were presented. The officers of the poor were severely criticised in their official capacity, and especially was the red-tape and other obstructing instead of helping features of those legal bodies, handled without gloves.

The lady president made the startling announcement that the aid rendered by the society to the poor of the city, had, no doubt, prevented a bread riot during the past few months.

Miss Annie Bishop, secretary, presented an exhaustive report, embracing the statement that 520 families had been aided during the year, an increase of 300 over the previous year.

Mrs. Bradley, treasurer, reported viz: Whole amount received $5,141.02; all of which was expended, with bills to the amount of $783.57 now on hand and unpaid.

Mr. John Foss addressed the meeting, remarking that some $6,000 of poor food was locked up in the hands of the township trustees, while many people were suffering for the need of it. Assurance was given the society that if they continued their work the necessary funds would be raised by the citizens.

Mayor Constantine presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the fund held by the township trustees for the poor; that it is not distributed as liberally as it should be, therefore we request that the trustees be more liberal with this fund, and more effective in behalf of the poor.

The announcement was made that there would be a meeting of the citizens on this (Friday) evening at 7:30 o'clock on the subject of the poor, for the purpose of securing the required funds for the society.

The society requested the former officials with the addition of a finance committee consisting of Mrs. E. L. Buchwalter, Mrs. S. M. Foss, and Mrs. P. P. Mast.

Report of the Treasurer.

In account with the Woman's Benevolent Society, for the year ending January 31, 1885:

Feb. 7 Harry Wishart $ 10
" 7 A. Friend 2 00
Mar. 1 Balance on hand 8 00
" 4 Superior Grain Mill Co. 30 00
" 4 Balance from relief fund 1 00
" 4 Balance from same 1 00
" 4 J. E. Krehmeyer 5 00
" 12 Cash 25
" 22 Cash and Forty Blackbirds 500 00
" 22 Employed by L. & W. R. Y. 14 00
Apr. 3 City Council 706 00
" 24 Flood relief fund 5 00
" 26 Cash 121 45
Sep. 15 Cash and Forty Blackbirds 57 45
" 24 City Council 20 00
Nov. 23 Thanksgiving collection 20 00
" 23 High St. M. E. Church 48 75
" 23 Same, English Lutheran 23 85
Dec. 10 Same, Episcopal 22 40
" 10 H. H. Warden 106 00
" 10 Miss R. E. 2 00
" 10 Wittenberg Y. M. C. A. 4 00
" 14 A. Friend 2 00
" 14 A. Friend 2 00
" 14 Second Presbyterian S. S. 15 00
" 14 United Presbyterian S. S. 28 10
" 14 Episcopal S. S. 6 00
" 14 Episcopal S. S. 24 25
" 14 James Carson 10 00
" 14 James Carson 10 00
" 23 From Friends 71 00
Jan. 2 Dramatic entertainment 125 00
" 7 A. Friend 25 00
Total receipts from all sources $141 02

DISBURSEMENTS—

Groceries $250 25
Coal 120 00
Dry goods 47 41
Shoes 344 65
Meat 29 63
Fruit 20 00
Printing 6 25
Furniture 8 50
Pres. and Vice-President 613 58
Total disbursements $1,041 02

A comparison with last year's report is as follows:

Total receipts from Council this year $141 02
Total receipts from Council last year 12 47
Total receipts from other sources this year 227 27
Total receipts from other sources last year 367 28
Increase over last year 265 98
Total receipts from all sources this year 514 02
Total receipts from all sources last year 329 75
Increase over last year 184 27
Disbursements this year 1,041 02
Disbursements last year 856 15
Bills on hand unpaid 153 17
Respectfully submitted,
R. H. BRADLEY, Treasurer.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 31, 1885.

The undersigned having examined all bills, checks and vouchers, showing receipts and expenditures from January 22, 1884, to January 31, 1885, of Mrs. Nannie Gunn Bradley, Treasurer of the Woman's Benevolent Society, find same correct. Also are pleased with the business system with which said accounts have been kept.

EDWARD L. BUCHWALTER,
ROBT. JOHNSON.

STRAY VERSES.

Within their turn on you Western world
The red lanes of sunset, to consume
The day of day's dull care, and make life
Bright for another sunrise to illumine.
—(Willie Fletcher Johnson.)

Then none was for a party;
Then all were for the State;
Then the great man helped the poor;
And the poor man loved the great;
Then lands were fairly portioned;
Then spoils were fairly sold;
The Romans were his brothers
In the brave days of old.
—(Lord Macanlay.)

And when night came, amidst the breathless
Heaven,
We'll guess what star should be our home
When love
Becomes immortal; while the perfume
Light
Stole through the mist of alabaster lamps,
And every air was heavy with the sighs
Of orange groves and music from sweet
Lutes and murens of low fountains that gush forth
In the mist of roses.
—(J. G. T.)

SENATORS' ORATORY.

THEIR DIFFERENT METHODS OF PREPARATION AND DELIVERY.

The Impetuosity of Logan and the Sarcasm of Ingalls—Conkling's Sentences—Hear's Looking—Glas's—Carle's—Carpenter.

(New York Sun.)

Considering these members who have reputations as speakers, it will be found that a great difference exists between them in respect to their method of preparing a speech of consequence. Mr. Carpenter spent days in the most exhaustive preparation of his speech. He has been known to spend fifty-eight hours at a time in his library, snatching but a few moments' sleep. Books and all other authorities were unmanacled, and he studied his subject from all sides. But he never gave a moment's thought to the arts of oratory. After writing out a complete syllabus, he regarded himself as thoroughly prepared. Very much after the same manner Senator Conkling prepared his speeches.

Senator Edmunds' sole preparation for a speech is the reading of authorities. He seldom makes any notes except of the reference to the authorities, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.

Mr. Hearst, on the other hand, not only very carefully prepared himself by an exhaustive study of the subject matter, and also weighed his sentences, writing and re-writing some of them many times. Many of his speeches were fairly written out before delivery, although he did not always confine himself to his notes when on the floor. Mr. Garfield took infinite pains with his speeches, preparing them as much with a view to their rhetorical effect as to their subject matter.

Mr. Carlisle owes his prominence in the house to the infinite pains with which he prepared himself for his speeches, especially that on the refunding bill four years ago, which put him in the front ranks, and that on the tariff. This preparation, however, went no further than an exhaustive study of the original data. He accepted no man's figures, but prepared his own from the official statistics, and never writes out a speech, either in full or in part. Mr. Thurnam's method of preparation was almost identical with that of Senator Edmunds.